The ISEE

The International Society for Ecological Economics

ISEE is a not-for-profit, member-governed, organization dedicated to advancing understanding of the relationships among ecological, social, and economic systems for the mutual well-being of nature and people.

Ecological economics exists because a hundred years of disciplinary specialization in scientific inquiry has left us unable to understand or to manage the interactions between the human and environmental components of our world. While none would dispute the insights that disciplinary specialization has brought, many now recognize that it has also turned out to be our Achilles heel. In an interconnected evolving world, reductionist science has pushed out the envelope of knowledge in many different directions, but it has left us bereft of ideas as to how to formulate and solve problems that stem from the interactions between humans and the natural world. How is human behaviour connected to changes in hydrological, nutrient or carbon cycles? What are the feedbacks between the social and natural systems, and how do these influence the services we get from ecosystems? Ecological economics as a field attempts to answer questions such as these.

You can join/rejoin at any time and your membership (and journal subscription, if you opt for one) will be valid for twelve months from signing on, regardless of date. Click on “Sign In” above right and follow the prompts. If you need help please email.

The International Society for Ecological Economics (ISEE) promotes understanding between ecologists and economists and integration of their disciplines through a journal, Ecological Economics, other publications, a biennial international conference, occasional smaller workshops, and support of the activities of regional societies of ecological economics.

The Secretariat of the ISEE, and the Ecological Economics Editorial Office, are located in Boston, Massachusetts, USA.

ISEE offers its members a number of benefits, including:

- An opportunity to network with people around the world who share an interest in discovering just how human societies are transforming and being transformed by their environment.
- Membership in Regional Society where available
- Biennial conferences open to all members at discounted rates.
- Membership fees progressively scaled according to income category.
- Website that offers information of value to the membership as a network of researchers and leaders in the field.
- Searchable database of members.
- Biannual newsletter.
- Information on job openings in the field.
- Information on research funding opportunities.
- Dissemination of ecological economic tools, and discounts on books and journals.
